

FAQ ebook

From April 2025, all our ebooks, in both PDF and ePub formats, will adopt LCP, a new DRM system that will allow all our readers to use accessible applications. Accessibility is important to us, and for this reason, we are committed to making all our publications increasingly accessible. We have decided to abandon Adobe DRM, which did not provide sufficient guarantees in this direction, and to adopt the open LCP standard developed by a European consortium of publishers, industry operators, and public libraries. This standard has been adopted, among others, by Medialibrary, the consortium of Italian civic libraries, and by Casalini Torrossa, a reference point for European academic publications in digital format.

What will happen to those who previously purchased an ebook with Adobe DRM?

They will still be able to read their ebooks using the applications they have used so far on the devices where the ebook has been installed. If they wish to install it on a new device, they will need to download it again from their personal area on our website and will be able to read it using the new method.

- it allows you to have reading tools at no cost and, if you prefer, read your books without installing applications on your devices. The online reader allows you to read your ebooks without having to install applications and also offers the possibility of reading books with the Read Aloud function.
